BASEBALL WRANGLE ON PLAYER'S UNION

Davy Fultz Has Not Given Up Hope That League Moguls Will Heed To Players' Alleged Rights.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

New York, June 2.—Davy Fultz evidently has not given up final hope of getting the baseball organizations to recognize some of the Baseball Players' Fraternity's demands. Despite repeated cold shoulder turn-downs by the Big Baseball powers, Fultz is as warmly championing his cause as if he had been given all the encouragement in the world.

But while of the baseball players' Fraternity's chief press agent, there is little danger of any sensational work like that employed last summer. To call a baseball player strike now and have its members ignore the union's demand for a walkout would be damaging to both the players' cause and the national game itself.

Fultz's shrewd activity among the chief moguls has caused some speculation as to what he has up his sleeves. With the Federal League question still wrangling, the baseball heads are hardly in a temper to listen to any demands from the players. And whether Fultz realizes it or not, the players themselves do not seem inclined to force any issue just now.

The Federal League has absorbed about all the major league talent it can stand. There is no indication that it has even over-dosed itself with the best playing ability on the market. But at any rate there is no haven now awaiting for the stars of both big leagues should their requests to the National commission be turned down again, granting that is what Fultz is doing. Federal league teams are suffering from poor gate receipts as are all the big leagues this season and unless President Fultz has some real dope to talk about will hardly get the magnate's attention for any length of time.

In fact it is not known what Davy has on his chest. He is so elusive that even the Fraternity agents after conferences with these agents and then they all depart smiling, but silent.

He probably is raking over certain demands made last year by the Fraternity, and which the commission flatly turned down. If he has any new leads he would not be so anxious to guard them. For without publicity all the demands he would of the Fraternity would avail nothing. And if Davy knows this as well as any other press agent.

Frank Baker's hard hitting isn't missed by the Athletics this year. That is the news as it comes straight from Connie Mack, the boy who put on his black clothes when he announced Baker had returned. "Baker's presence on the club would have made two games' difference in the standing of my team," recently declared Mack. "It's poor pitching that is holding us down in last place, not our batting. Even though McInnis, Struss and Oldring are crippled and Baker and Collins are not in the line-up any more, we would be up there in the first division if our pitchers had delivered the brand of goods I expected them to."

Del Gainer, now with the Red Sox formerly with Detroit, and celebrated for his frequent misfortunes in the way of broken bones, still has his chance to get into the big league. Gainer has been hoping against hope to beat Hoblitzell out of the first base job; when Hoblitzell was hurt a few days ago, Gainer had the chance of his life on the third day after Hoblitzell's injury. Gainer suffered a broken arm! Can you beat that for tough fortune?

These fighters who insist upon earning a living by picking lemons have a frightful time getting by when they accidentally get hold of grapefruit.

Stallings has one habit that is probably unique. When his team is committing boneheads or being badly beaten, the Miracle Man hurles himself at the water-butt and gulps drink after drink of the aqua pura, probably to cool his coppers and drown the outburst of furious phraseology. According to credible observers, during a recent severe defeat of the team, George consumed twenty-seven dips of aqua pura without a stop, and must have been in shape to serve as an aquarium when the game was over.

Concrete stands mean more baseballs. Sometimes concrete roughens the surface, creating an "emery" ball; sometimes it breaks the seams. Umpires are throwing such balls out on the least provocation.

Freddie Welsh will risk his title July 5 in Denver. Charley White, the Chicago scrapper, is the man who will get the chance to wrest the title from the Englishman's brow. Arrangements for a twenty round go between the two battlers have practically been clinched, since both have agreed to compromise differences that have been keeping them from signing up.

Judging from standings, Connie Mack when he started in to rebuild the Athletics machine should have reversed the procedure. Ken Coggins and sold the rest of the team to Chicago.

When Colonel Goethals finishes correcting the slides in the canal he will be retained by Conn's Mack and John McGraw for similar work in Philadelphia and New York.

The Toledo boxing commission has been asked to reduce its percentage of the club receipts from 10 per cent to 5 per cent, the promoters claiming they cannot make money under present conditions. Other city and state commissions take 5 per cent, except New York where the edge was recently boosted to 7 1/2 per cent. One Toledo promoter produced evidence showing he had lost $1,000 on the season. It is believed the commission will grant the reduction.

The loss of one more argument was chalked up against John J. McGraw by the board of directors of the National league when that august body by mail vote, vindicated President Tener's award of the game to the Braves that was played at the Polo grounds on Thursday, April 29. This decision leaves the Little Napoleon still in the maiden class of the National league debating society. The game referred to was the one which saw the manager of the Giants try unsuccessfully to incorporate Benny Kauff, a would-be deserter from the Brooklyn Federals, into his lineup.

Sam Crane, the New York baseball scribe, veteran of forty campaigns, calls the Chicago Cubs quitters. Sam has reiterated that charge against Chicago forty seasons now.

"All London walks," says a head-line, Ed Reulbach must have been pitching against London. A sensational development of the failure of the Iowa University track team to score better than a bad third in the Iowa State meet at Des Moines came a few days ago when Stephen H. Bush, a former Harvard athlete, now a member of the Iowa university board in control of athletics, attacked the team in an open letter. He alleged that Iowa has had no great athletes in years who have not dissipated and who have been eligible always. He stingingly arraigned the "stroller, parlor athlete, loafer, and dissipating intelligible," whose presence on track teams "spell defeat and shame."

FABER DOES THE PITCHING AND COLLINS BEATS TIGERS

Chicago, June 2.—Urban Faber, the Six whirler from Cascade, Iowa, made it eight straight wins for his record yesterday when he held the Tigers from winning while Eddie Collins was winning for the Chicago Americans. Six hits was all the wallowing Tigers could gather off Faber with his mysterious hooks and fast ball. His three raps, out of four times to bat, scored three times, enough to shove the Detroit team further down the ladder.

In his three hits, Collins walloped one double and showed Cobb a few stunts about base running. He went from first to third in the eighth when Collins was beating out an infield hit and scored then scored an out at the Sox gained a lead in the third when Boston scored and then came the tallies made by Collins—three of them. The Tigers were helpless before Faber until the ninth, when they scored a lone tally to escape the white-wash brush.

Zabel Beats Pirates.
Pittsburgh, June 2.—Zabel, the Kansas City chemist, turned the tables on the Pittsburgh Nationals yesterday, shutting the Pirates out in a 2 to 0 victory for the Cubs. Two hits, dinky singles, were all the Pirates could nick for, as the Bruin hurler was going in rare form. Good celebrated his return to the game by scoring in the first, and Sair made it sure in the seventh, counting on a bit by Freeman. Babe Adams opposed the Cubs, and except for two bad innings, checked the leading Chicagoans.

Well, that's P. A., no matter how you hook it up—pipe or cigarette. It just jams-joy into your system! You nail that fact hot off the bat, because it's case-cards information! IT MIGHT RESULT?

Should President Wilson finally decide upon a policy of non-intercourse between the United States and Germany as a result of the exchange of notes between the two nations, it might result in the seizure of practically a hundred million dollars worth of German property in this country. Non-intercourse, however, means eventual war, although there might be no actual hostilities. The hundred million dollars worth of property is represented by the passenger vessels now lying in our harbors. Frederick Underhill, a famous authority on international law, cites cases to justify this conclusion which would give the United States the authority for such action.

There are sixty-eight German and Austrian merchant steamers, aggregating 577,208 gross tons, laid up in United States ports. In addition there are interned in our waters the cruisers Prinz Eitel Friedrich and Kronprinz Wilhelm interned at Norfolk; a gunboat held at Honolulu and the merchant steamer Odenwald at San Juan, Porto Rico. Their value is estimated by experts at $100,000,000.

In the port of New York there are twenty-nine vessels: Boston, eight; Baltimore, three; San Francisco, two; Philadelphia, three; New York, two; Galveston, two; Seattle, one; Honolulu, three; Savannah, one; Honolulu, eight; Hilo, one; Pensacola, three; Jacksonville, one; Tampa, one. Fifteen are owned by the North German Lloyd line and twenty-five by the Hamburg-American company. The giant Vaterland, rated at 54,282 tons gross, with accommodations for 3,000 persons, is the biggest, and they range all the way down to the Neptune at San Francisco, weighing 197 gross tons.

Fifty-four of the sixty-eight merchant ships are German and the remainder Austrian. The full list of craft over 10,000 tons, with name of steamer, gross tonnage and owner, is as follows:

Vaterland, 54,282, Hamburg-American; George Washington, 25,570, North German Lloyd; Amerika, 22,622, Hamburg-American; Kronprinzessin Cecilie, 19,502, North German Lloyd; Kaiser Wilhelm II, 19,361, North German Lloyd; President Lincoln, 18,168, Hamburg-American; President Grant, 18,072, Hamburg-American; Cincinnati, 16,330, Hamburg-American; Pennsylvania, 13,333, Hamburg-American; Grosser Kurfurst, 12,102, North German Lloyd; Bulgaria, 11,440, Hamburg-American; Barbarossa, 10,984, North German Lloyd; Prinzess Irene, 10,893, North German Lloyd; Frederick, 10,702, North German Lloyd; Rhein, 10,531, Hamburg-American; Rhein, 10,558, North German Lloyd.

However, it is to be hoped such steps will not be necessary and that the differences can be adjusted without recourse to such drastic action on the part of the government at Washington. Today's dispatches, however, announce that the president will stand firmly by his first statement and demands, and consequently until the matter is adjusted no one can actually foresee what might occur.

THE FINAL DRIVE.

The final drive of the administration floor leaders in the assembly and senate during the coming week is to be directed toward the passage of the five big consolidation measures promised by the administration as one of the means of reducing taxation. These measures have been threshed out in various committee hearings and the members of both houses have heard the pros and cons discussed fully. Now comes the final drive of the administration to pass them.

As the majority of the measures have been suggested in part by some of the ultra progressives as necessary to success of the plan to reduce taxes, it is possible they will pass without much trouble, but on the other hand they bear the stamp and official approval of the present conservative administration and it passed would be credited to this fact and this may result in the progressives fighting them.

Governor Philipp is much in earnest in his efforts to untangle the unbusinesslike organization of state management and re-organize it upon a firm business basis. He is a business man from the sole of his shoes up and he has made a success of his business ventures. He is not attempting to do anything revolutionary, but wishes to redeem the pledges he made the voters of the state in his campaign for nomination and election.

The legislature, elected on platforms of economy in state affairs, should remember this fact and stand behind the administration in this final effort to bring into existence order out of chaos. Economy was the slogan of the last campaign in both republican and democratic parties. Economy can not be realized unless it is practiced and this is what these administration measures would do. It is to be hoped the final drive will be successful and the bills passed in two-four time so as to relieve the anxiety of the taxpayers who are anxiously watching for results from Madison.

ARE NOT PREPARED.

Despite talk of raising an immense volunteer army, enlisting a half million men, drilling and equipping them and otherwise preparing for war, this country is in a state of unpreparedness that can not be denied. There is no subject regarding which this administration does more juggling with words than that of military preparedness. Representative Gardner, of Massachusetts, and others urged the appointment of a joint commission to investigate and report on the preparedness of the military and naval forces of the United States. The administration bitterly opposed it. Why? If the army and navy were as well prepared as is claimed what could such a commission, composed of both parties but with the democrats in the majority, have shown, except that claims that the military establishment was unprepared were unfounded? Mr. Daniels and even the president have attempted to create the impression that the sole purpose of Mr. Gardner and those who think like him was to procure an increase of the military and naval forces. But that was not their chief purpose. What they wanted to do was to get an efficient organization so that, should there be war, all the machinery would move together and there would be that co-operation and preparedness so essential to military success. The secretary of war has frankly stated the unprepared condition of the army, but frankness is a word apparently omitted from Mr. Daniels' dictionary.

If it wasn't for the obituary poetry there would be very little real humor in this country. The derby hat has received several severe setbacks, but is still worn by a few old-fashioned fellows who were dudes back in 1847.

On the Hoosier table you have nothing except what you actually use. Economy or Cheapness WHICH?

You can buy cheaply and yet lose money. You can pay good prices for things, and yet be economical.

For economy means getting the best value for the money you spend.

The goods in this store have been selected with this view of economy. They are some of them low-priced and some of them high-priced. But whichever they are, they are the best value for the money that can be obtained to our knowledge.

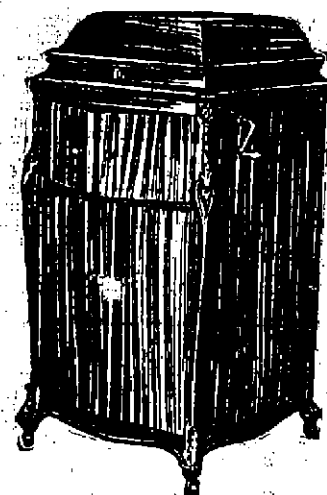

Standard goods like Crisco, Royal Baking Powder and other items that Miss Peet uses, at standard prices—a policy of complete satisfaction or money refunded—and a service that stops at nothing within reason—these are the things that keep our old customers year after year, and each day bring us new ones to add to our visiting list.

Miss Peet expressed warm approval of our store and our methods.

SPECIAL QUALITY
Ice Cream

Has Set a New Standard of Purity and Quality in Ice Cream

Tonight when you eat the BAKED ICE CREAM served by Miss Peet at the Domestic Science School note, if you please, the fine rich flavor of our Ice Cream. Not weak or flat, but satisfying and good without the covering up of rich and highly flavored fountain syrups. Note, too, the smooth and even texture that is only possible by the use of pure, natural cream "as it comes from the cow." You will not find it lumpy and coarse as is the case where little cream and lots of filler is used. And lastly, note the delicious and lingering after taste which speaks for purity of material, care in handling and production and more than all perfect cleanliness in manufacture. Altogether is the "Pure Food" cream and adds one more supreme delight to the joys of things culinary.

Hold up the bottle—you will find every drop absolutely clean and pure.

We have investigated the work done by the De Laval Clarifier and find that it greatly improves the best milk—no matter how carefully it has been handled. Leading Health Authorities are recommending clarification of all milk.

We have always tried to furnish our customers with the best possible milk and for this reason are now clarifying our milk with this machine.

CLARIFIED MILK REDUCES FOOD EXPENSE

Many persons do not use as much milk as they should because they feel that it is not as clean as other foods.

The De Laval Clarifier removes every possible objection of this kind. The impurities in milk are removed by centrifugal force, and it is rendered pleasing and palatable.

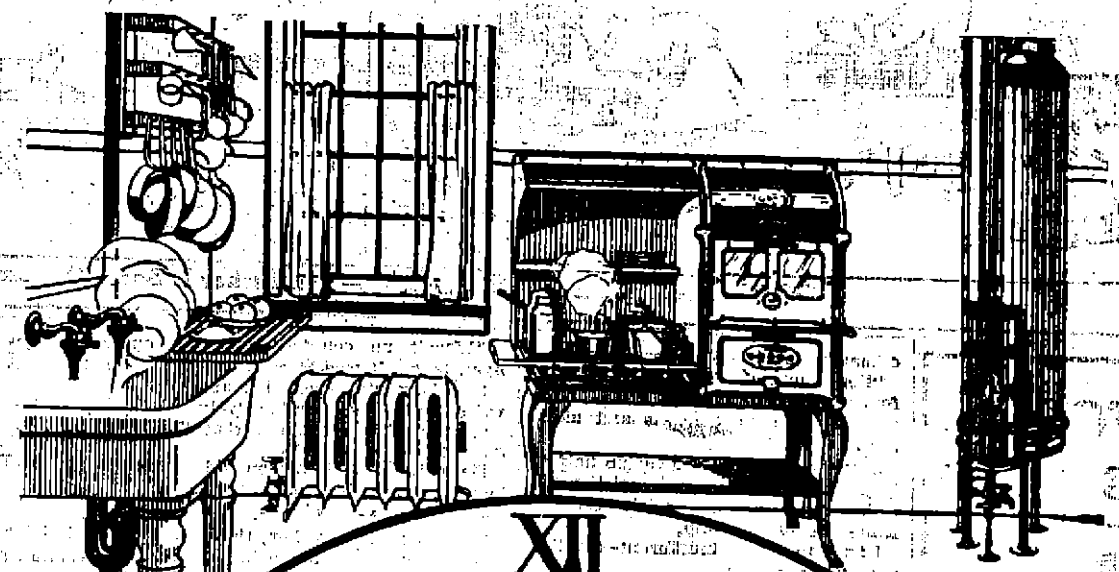

"PURE" MILK is one of Nature's best foods—one quart being equal in food value to each of the following:

8 eggs
2 lbs. of Chicken
4 lbs. Beets
5 lbs. Turnips
6 lbs. Spinach
2 lbs. Potatoes
1 lb. Salt Codfish
3 lbs. Fresh Codfish
4 lbs. Cabbage
3/4 lb. Lean Beef

All housewives will find that they can reduce the total food cost per month by increasing the use of milk. TRY IT! We will be glad to hear our telephone ring at any time if you want us to deliver more milk.

Miss Peet Selected Consumer's Ice Because of Its Purity

The Ice which will be used by Miss Peet during her demonstration at The Gazette's Free Domestic Science School was ordered from the Consumer's Pure Ice and Fuel Co., because there is nothing in it that will contaminate the foods used.

A Splendid Acknowledgement of the Quality of This Ice

Janesville housewives should appreciate, as Miss Peet has, the purity of Consumer's Ice.

No home that values the health of its family should have any other Ice than Consumer's. Other ice is dangerous and will contaminate the food which comes in contact with it. Consumer's Ice comes from a beautiful, spring-fed lake which lies at a high elevation and is entirely surrounded by virgin timber. There can be no purer ice.

We Will be Here Next Year

There are a few people in Janesville who would have you believe that we will not be here next year and anyone who takes ice from us this season will not be able to obtain ice anywhere next year. Such statements are utterly false and to quickly give them the lie and brand them false we offer to issue a bond of good faith to anyone who doubts us, insuring that we will be in the Janesville field next year, smiling and doing a flourishing business.

CHAPTER XXVII. She Proposes.

AS a rule, the poorer the player the louder his exhortations. Jasper Titus was one of the worst players I've ever seen, but he was the personification of gentility even under the most provoking circumstances. For instance, at the famous "Crater" it was my good fortune to pitch a ball fairly on the green from the tee. His masher shot landed his ball about twenty feet up the steep hill which guards the green. It rolled half-way back. Without a word of disgust or so much as a scowl he climbed up and blazed away at it again, not once, but fourteen times by actual count. On the seventeenth stroke he triumphantly laid his ball on the green. Most men would have lifted and conceded the hole to me. He played it out.

"A man never gets anywhere, Mr. Smart," said he, untroubled by his miserable exhibition, "unless he keeps plugging away at a thing. That's my principle in life. Keep at it. There is satisfaction in putting the blamed ball in the hole, even if it does require twenty strokes. You did it in three, but you'll soon forget the feat. I'm not likely to forget the troubles I had going down in twenty, and there lies the secret of success. If success comes easy we pass it off with a laugh; if it comes hard we grit our teeth and remember the ways and means. You may not believe it, but I took thirty-three strokes for that hole one day last week. Day before yesterday I did it in four. Perhaps it wouldn't occur to you to think that it's a darned sight easier to do it in four than it is in thirty-three. Got the idea?"

"I think I do, Mr. Titus," said I. "The things that come easy are never appreciated."

"Right, my boy. It's what we have to work for like natters that we be awake thinking about."

We came out upon the eminence overlooking the next hole, which lay far below us. As I stooped to tee up my ball a gleeful shout came up the hillside.

"Hello, John Bellamy!"

Glancing down, I saw Jasper Junior at the edge of the wagon road. He was waving his cap, and even at that distance I could see the ruddiness in his good looking young face. A young and attractively dressed woman stood beside him. I waved my hand and shouted a greeting.

"I thought you said he'd gone to Covington to see her off," I said, turning to the young man's father, with a grin.

"Not the same girl," said he succinctly, squinting his eyes. "That's the little Parsons girl from Richmond. He was to meet her at Covington. Jasper is a scientific butterfly. He makes both ends meet—nearly always. Now, no one but a genius could have fixed it up to see one girl off and meet another on the same train."

Later on Jasper Junior and I strolled over to the casino veranda, the chatty Miss Parsons between us, but leaning a shade nearer to young Titus than to me, although she appeared to be somewhat overwhelmed at meeting a real live author. Mr. Titus, as was his habit, hurried on ahead of us. I afterward discovered he had a dread of pneumonia.

"Aline never said a word about your coming, John," said Jasper Junior. He called me John with considerable gusto. "She's learning how to hold her tongue."

"It happens that she didn't know I was coming," said I dryly. He whistled.

"She's off somewhere with Amberdale. Ever meet him? He's one of the finest chaps I know. You'll like him, Miss Parsons. He's not at all like a Britisher."

"I do not expect to be married for at least a year."

times in my short career, but for the life of me I cannot understand what attraction it possesses that could induce people to go there for luncheon and then spend a whole afternoon loitering about the place. But that seems to have been precisely what the countess and her lordship did on the day of my arrival at the Homestead. The "other chap," Skelly, came riding home alone at 3 o'clock. She did not return until nearly 6. By that time I was in a state of suppressed fury that almost drove me to the railway station with a single and you might say childish object in view.

I had a pleasant visit with Mrs. Titus, who seemed overjoyed to see me. In fact, I had luncheon with her. Mr. Titus, it appeared, never ate luncheon. He had a dread of typhoid, I believe, and as he already possessed gout and insomnia and an intermittent tendency to pain in his abdomen and couldn't drink anything alcoholic or eat anything starchy I found myself wondering what he really did for a living.

Mrs. Titus talked a great deal about Lord Amberdale. She was most tiresome after the first half hour, but I must say that the luncheon was admirable. I happened to be hungry. Having quite made up my mind that Aline was going to marry Amberdale, I proceeded to upset the theory that a man in love is a creature without gastronomical aspirations by vulgarly stuffing myself with half a lamb chop, a slice of buttered bread and nine pickles.

Along about 5 o'clock I went to my room. I darsay I was suiking. A polite bellboy tapped on my door at half past 6. He presented a small envelope to me, thanked me three or four times and as an after thought announced that there was to be an answer, whereupon I read the countess' note with a magnificently unreadable face.

I cleared my throat and (I think) squared my shoulders somewhat as a soldier does when he is being commended for valor and said:

"Present my compliments to the countess and say that Mr. Smart will be down in five minutes."

The boy stared. "The—the what, sir?"

"The what?" I demanded. "I mean the who, sir."

"The countess, the lady who sent you up with this note."

"Wasn't no countess sent me up hyer, boss. It was Miss Tarnsey." Somehow staggered, I managed to wave my hand comprehensively. "Never mind. Just say that I'll be down in two minutes."

He grinned. "I reckon I'd better hustle or you'll beat me down, boss."

She was still in her riding habit when I found her alone in the parlor of the Titus suit.

I give you my word my heart almost stopped beating. I've never seen any one so lovely as she was at that moment—never, I repeat. Her hair, blown by the kind November winds, strayed—but no! I cannot begin to define the loveliness of her. There was a warm, rich glow in her cheeks and a light in her eyes that actually bewildered me, and more than that I am not competent to utter.

"You have come at last," she said, and her voice sounded very far off, although I was lifting her ungloved hand to my lips. She clinched my fingers tightly. I remember that and also that my hand shook violently and that my face felt pale.

"I think I said that I had come at last. She took my other hand in hers and drawing dangerously close to me, said:

"I do not expect to be married for at least a year, John."

"I—I congratulate you," I stammered foolishly.

"I have a feeling that it isn't decent for one to marry inside of two years after one has been divorced."

"How is Rosemary?" I murmured.

"You are in love with me, aren't you, John, dear?"

"Good—good heaven!" I gasped.

"I know you are. That's why I am so sure of myself. Is it asking too much of you to marry me in a year from?"

I haven't the faintest notion how long afterward it was that I asked her what was to become of that poor, unlucky Lord Amberdale.

"He's a dear, and he is going to marry a bred-in-the-bone countess next January. You will like him, because he is every bit as much in love with his real countess as you are with a sham one. He is a bird of your feather. And now don't you want to come with me to see Rosemary?"

"Rosemary?" I murmured, as in a dream—a luxurious, lotus born dream. She took my arm and advanced with me into a room adjoining the parlor.

As we passed through the door she suddenly squeezed my arm very tightly and laid her head against my shoulder.

We were in a small sitting room, confronting Jasper Titus, his wife and his tiny granddaughter, who was ready for bed.

"You won't have to worry about me any longer, daddy, dear," said Aline, her voice suddenly breaking.

"Well, I'll be—well, well, well!" cried my late victim of the links. "Is this the way the wind blows?"

I was perfectly dumb. My face was scarlet. My dazzled eyes saw nothing but the fine, aristocratic features of Aline's mother. She was leaning slightly forward in her chair, and a slow but unmistakably joyous smile was creeping into her face.

"Aline!" she cried, and Aline went to her.

Jasper Titus led Rosemary up to me. "Kiss the gentleman, kiddie," said he busily, lifting the little one up to me.

She gave a sudden shriek of recognition, and I took her in my arms.

"Ha, ha, ha!" laughed I, without the slightest idea of what I was doing or why I did it. Sometimes I wonder if there has ever been any insanity in our family. I know there have been fools, for I have my Uncle Rillas' word for it.

Mr. Titus picked up the newspaper he had been reading.

"Listen to this, Aline. It will interest you. It says here that our friend Tarnsey is going to marry that fool of a Cincinnati girl we were talking about the other day. I know her father, but I've never met her mother. Old Bob Thackery has got millions, but he's only got one daughter. What a blamed shame!"

It must be perfectly obvious to you, kind reader, that I am going to marry Aline Tarnsey. In spite of all my professed opposition to marrying a divorcee, I argued the whole matter out with myself, but not until I was irrevocably committed. She says she needs me. Well, isn't that enough? In fact, I am now trying my best to get her to shorten the probationary period. She has taken off three months, God bless her, but I still hope for a further and more generous reduction—for good behavior!

I cleared my throat and (I think) squared my shoulders somewhat as a soldier does when he is being commended for valor and said:

"Present my compliments to the countess and say that Mr. Smart will be down in five minutes."

The boy stared. "The—the what, sir?"

"The what?" I demanded. "I mean the who, sir."

"The countess, the lady who sent you up with this note."

WRONG TO TAKE RISKS

AUTOISTS MUST HANDLE STIMULANTS WITH CAUTION.

Overindulgence in Intoxicating Liquor While Driving Car May Be Most Serious Matter.

The exhilarating effects of motor speeding, whether due to alcoholic stimulant or otherwise, dispose certain motor car drivers to assume risks that they would avoid at another time, and it is this unsteadiness that makes these motorists unable to control their machines as promptly and efficiently as ordinarily.

Of course it would be almost impossible to enforce a law prohibiting motor car drivers from using intoxicating liquors before or during a drive unless their disobedience causes serious accident. The vast majority of accidents are not due to evil intention. Joy riders generally mean no harm, but are frequently carried away by the exhilarating effects of overindulgence.

When the brain becomes stimulated beyond its normal condition through influences other than the excitement from speeding, it becomes easier to understand the condition of a driver who has consumed more than a moderate quantity of alcohol, enough to quicken his senses and affect, even though slightly, the co-ordination of his brain and muscles.

In the first place, such a motorist takes greater risks than he would otherwise; and, secondly, he cannot control his muscles as promptly and accurately as before. Consequently, a great number of accidents occur on what are practically intoxicated joy rides, whether they are recognized under that name or not, and such offenders must be punished accordingly.

Francis M. Hugo, New York Secretary of State.

Front Wheel Alignment. Numerous complaints are registered because front tires wear out more quickly than the rear tires. The fact is that front tires should last considerably longer than the rear tires, in that they are relieved of driving strains. Excessive wear on front tires is more generally due to misalignment of the front wheels. Drivers forget that they often hit the curb with the front wheels, and in this manner throw them out of alignment. The front wheels should have a slight foregather and a slight undergather. These dimensions should be checked frequently if one wishes to obtain best results from his tires.

Wood Made From Straw. Artificial wood for matches is being made from straw by an inventive Frenchman.

I'LL PUT THIS FLY-PAPER IN THE OPEN WINDOW AND THE WIND WILL BLOW THE FLIES ON IT!

AND HE DID—SPLAT!

Disconnect the Battery. The more recent model cars are now equipped with electric lighting and starting systems. This electrical equipment necessitates the use of an expensive battery. In laying the car up for the winter care should be taken to disconnect the battery and store it with some responsible person who will give it proper care. If left in the car it will deteriorate, and by spring will have become of very little use. During the winter season is a good time to have the battery overhauled and cared for by a responsible person.

"Strange," said the first tramp, meditatively, "how few of our youthful dreams come true!"

"Oh, I dunno!" said his companion.

"Have you anything to say before I pass sentence?"

ITCHING ECZEMA COVERED ENTIRE BODY, RESINOL CURED

Could Not Sleep, & Remedies Had Failed. Resinol Stopped Itching Immediately.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 11, 1914.—"My entire body, even my eyelids, was completely covered with blisters as large as a pea. When one would burst water would come from it, and then it would turn into a very painful sore. The burning and itching were something terrible, and I COULD NOT SLEEP nor rest. I think I had one of the worst cases of eczema a human being ever had."

"I used eight different kinds of remedies without success. I then tried Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap and it stopped the itching IMMEDIATELY. I gradually noticed a change for the better. Now I am entirely cured, and am without a pimple or blemish on any part of my body."

(Signed) Edward F. McCullough, 249 River St., Mattapan. Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap heal skin eruptions, clear away pimples, and form a most valuable household treatment for sores, burns, etc. Sold by all druggists.

Disconnect the Battery. The more recent model cars are now equipped with electric lighting and starting systems. This electrical equipment necessitates the use of an expensive battery. In laying the car up for the winter care should be taken to disconnect the battery and store it with some responsible person who will give it proper care. If left in the car it will deteriorate, and by spring will have become of very little use. During the winter season is a good time to have the battery overhauled and cared for by a responsible person.

Lawyer's Ability. It seems that a lawyer is something of a carpenter. He can file a bill, split a hair, chop logic, dovetail an argument, make an entry, get up a case, frame an indictment, empanel a jury, put them in a box, bore a court, chisel a client, and other like things.

WHAT ARE YOU?

An acorn? Or an oak? There are both in every line of business.

Eighteen years ago William G. Beek was a decidedly dubious-looking little acorn in the retail optical business. Now there are only two larger oaks in Chicago in his field of work.

What made him grow?

He tells about it himself on a different page of this paper. The first six months he was in business he wondered every thirty days why he'd ever entered it anyhow.

Then he started advertising in the newspapers. Simultaneously he started to grow. He is still advertising, and he is still growing.

ARE YOU?

Acorns are not worth much—until they become oaks in any business.

There's only one means of accomplishing the full growth.

That's through us. Our ideas, experience, services, are yours. Command them.

Optician Paves Way To Success By Advertising

Wm. G. Beck of Chicago, Established Business 18 Years Ago on $100 Capital—Now Owns Third Largest Retail Establishment in Chicago.

Credits Wonderful Growth to Newspaper Advertising. By Andrew L. Demling.

"As for oaks and acorns, I was about the most dubious-looking little acorn you can imagine my five months as an independent business man. That is, I was not of my next month's existence as an establishment."

The speaker was Wm. G. Beck, owner of the third largest retail optician's establishment in Chicago.

"You see," he continued, "the first of the month is an inspiring time to a penniless youngster who has had the hardihood to throw down the gauntlet to the business world."

Customers' Avarice Starts Boom. "One day I was standing by my front window, watching the crowds going past my door, when I walked a well-dressed, imposing looking man, 'young man,' he began, as I stood at attention, 'what do you know about eyes?'"

"That depends," I replied, moved to frankness by the directness of his question and look. "Sometimes I know very little, and sometimes I know a great deal, when I'm balancing my books, I wonder what I'm in the optical business for, anyway."

"You haven't any corner on such self-congratulations," he said. "But see what you can make of this eye of mine. So I examined him for glasses. After I'd finished, he remarked, as though it was a matter of course, 'How on earth do all you fellows keep going, anyhow? Where do you draw your trade from?'"

"Well," I replied, "when we draw it, it comes from our oculists. 'You don't seem to need a speed limit on your success.'"

"Oh," I returned, "getting started is slow in any business. It's only a question of holding on while I've been here only six months."

"That's all right, too," he replied. "But why don't you go ahead and make money while you're waiting?"

"Well, I'm waiting, and I'm waiting for people to discover you?"

"Suggest an alternative," I demanded. "I advertise in the newspapers," he returned. "That's the only way in the world to make quick money in your business, from what I can see. Now, here's an idea for you."

Results Effect Conversion to Advertising. "I hadn't known it, but he was one of the best-known advertising writers in town, and we put our heads together and made a plan."

"I was skeptical of its doing much good, and had a great deal of doubt about my diminutive capital. But my customer and advertiser was also an optimist, and carried me along on his high expectations."

"At the end of my first month as a newspaper advertiser, I was the most enthusiastic and irrepressible convert he had ever made."

"The more I made, the more I advertised—the more I advertised, the more I made. That's where I got this scale."

Runs Daily Ads in Newspapers Year. "You didn't know what you were calling forth when you asked me if newspaper advertising was beneficial to the optician, did you? Well, you just happened to touch on one of my hobbies."

"How often do you indulge it?" I asked. "Every day of the year," he replied. "But notice how I advertise. I have no bargains, no sales, I make no free examinations. My ads are for the purpose of keeping people continually conscious that 'week stands for 'Optician' and 'optician' stands for 'Beck.'"

Started Career As Errand Boy. "How did you come to adopt this work, Mr. Beck?"

"Chiefly because I obtained my first 'job' in an optical house, I suppose. It was in the capacity of errand boy, and I felt my responsibilities too such a degree, it seemed to me that I was better off than was expected."

"Anyhow, it wasn't long before I became a salesman, and in due time manager. Finally, I became a city salesman for a wholesale concern."

"The next step was this business of my own. A short while ago I acquired the license for grinding and selling one-piece bifocals in Chicago—an investment greater than my entire receipts during the first half year of my business, before I began to advertise."

Why Opticians Ought to Advertise. "And so we came back to advertising. As suggested, an assistant switched off the lights in the front of the store, intimating that the hour was 5:30, and I rose to act on the suggestion."

"'Well, better not,' he retorted, 'if we're to get out of here tonight.' "But there's just this about it: constant, conspicuous and dignified, sans newspaper advertising, is the indispensable ingredient to big success for the optician. Eighteen years ago I started with a capital of a scant $100. Today there are only two larger establishments in Chicago."

ILLINOIS PUBLIC UTILITIES COMMISSION HEARS JITNEY CASE [BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Springfield, Ill., June 2.—Is a jitney bus a public utility, and must it have a certificate of convenience and necessity before it can operate the streets of a city?

This was the question presented to the Illinois public utilities commission which today heard arguments in the case of the Jacksonville Street Railway company against the Jacksonville Motor company of Jacksonville, asking to compete the motor company to come under the commission's control.

The commission seeks to put the jitneys out of business in the state under the commission's policy of supporting regulated monopoly rather than unrestricted competition, the commission having held that new concerns seeking to enter the field where there already is a going concern serving the public in the same or similar way must show reasons why a public good they should be permitted to operate.

BLUE OVERALLS PASS AS WAR DIMINISHES INDIGO DYE SUPPLY

Janesville Firms Will Not Feel Effect of Scarcity Until First of Year They Report.

Despite scattered reports to the contrary the seriousness of the dye situation is becoming more and more evident as days pass by. Manufacturers have come to realize that something must be done to remedy or offset difficulties in the procuring of the desirable chemicals.

And numerous Janesville manufacturing industries have already felt the scarcity of the dyes. Press reports of late have informed the laborer that shortly should the war continue his overall will not be blue but of a dirty grey color. Both the Janesville Clothing company and the Janesville Shirt & Overall company have lately received numerous samples of the materials to which overalls are coming to. While the demand for the goods is not so great as it was some time ago, there is no blue color in the cloth.

Neither firm, however, has been compelled as yet to purchase the non-blue material. Both companies continue to just such a crisis and laid in large supplies when the market was favorable. As it is now the overalls companies have enough material on hand to last through the year and until January 1 neither will have to take into their storerooms the new stock.

According to Henry K. Weber of the Janesville Clothing company, the current price of indigo is thirteen cents per pound. Due to the war, however, indigo has gone up by leaps and bounds and is now worth $1.21 per pound. Incidentally, as the supply in the hands of American exporters diminishes, blue goods must necessarily be displaced by some other colored material.

Mr. Weber of the Janesville Shirt & Overall concern, said that even in the wood colors, such as black, numerous firms were refusing orders for material of this nature, being unable to deliver, due to the dyestuff for such or guarantee the fastness of the colors. "To come right down to facts," Mr. Weber said, "there is but a comparatively small amount of indigo exported from Germany to the United States for the dyeing of overalls and shirts and jackets. While the blue is supposed to be of indigo origin, it is not. It is the dye of coal tar products."

"The United States has attempted to turn its hand to the manufacture of dyes to offset the cutting off of the supply from Germany; also to establish itself on a basis of competition with the old country. This will be a hard matter in the line of dollars and cents. German chemists have always been noted for their efficiency in securing by-products from coal tar and for many years have studied the industry until now they easily lead the world in this respect."

Small amounts of coal tar dyes, compared with the imports of the United States, have been made here for some years past. Just now there is a flatter of special interest in the purchase of a small aniline dye plant in Brooklyn which has been run successfully by a naturalized German, a Dr. William Beckers, and which is being very much enlarged.

"American" methods, making for the saving of time over the practice in Germany, have an interesting place in the Beckers works, and perhaps in other similar plants elsewhere. The dyes are mixed as liquids, ingredients being added to the water in a succession of several tanks through which the developing dye-liquid progresses. This liquid is then evaporated, and the dry dye-stuff is left behind in granular form and sold as a powder. In Germany the evaporating is generally done in large open vats. In the Brooklyn plant, it is done under a vacuum, which is a much quicker process. About nine hundred distinct chemical substances—dyes—compose the actual commercial culmination of the coal tar dye industry; this, it should be noted, is not the whole of the coal tar industry, for besides the dyes there is a whole manufacture of medicinal substances, and that of coal tar explosives upon which both Germany and England now rely. The nine hundred dyes are made by the aid of nearly three hundred other substances—the so-called "intermediates" which are not in themselves dyes, and which are derived from ten "groups" or basic substances which are obtainable in various ways from coal tar.

Altogether the industry embraces some twelve hundred distinct processes of manufacture. These processes require an enormous number and variety of appliances, and in many of them only one or two hundred pounds of the product can be made at a time.

The world's entire production of coal tar dyes has been lately estimated by a careful authority as not over $100,000,000 in value, all of these being produced in a works which occupy an aggregate factory of not over one square mile.

The problem of the by-products is the greatest obstacle in the way of an American coal tar industry under present conditions. The by-product list who has branched out in this line has found.

As the processes advance from the obtaining of the crude bases, not only in number, each chemical transformation, or modification, gives rise to not only the substance or substances immediately desired, but to the additional substances for which no use is known beforehand.

Therefore, somehow, all the by-products must be made a source of profit, or the industry will fail; for the by-products are so numerous and make up so much the larger bulk of the substances from the various operations that they would devour the profits from the dyes if they were treated as lost or useless materials.

Just here is where Germany has the advantage of the rest of the world, for her chemists began with the beginning of the coal tar industry and found hundreds of uses for the by-products as the processes of dye manufacture developed and became more and more complicated. They kept their commercial balance on the side of profit all the way up.

The result is that among thousands of German coal tar factories none tries to make the entire series of products. Some factories only a certain of the crudes, others make certain crudes and certain of the intermediates and of those that make the finished dyes, each has its own products of products. This means that the individual plants of the whole country are in co-operation.

"It will take American industry a long while to perfect the dye manufacturing from this," Mr. Weber said. "And at the present time we can only hope that our "Spirit" will succeed in that the war will terminate and permit the influx of Germany's over supply of dyes."

Milton, Wis., June 1.—The entire commencement week of Milton High School was one of interest and pleasure, in spite of the bad weather which prevailed. VUDOR RE-ENFORCED PORCH SHADES are made of light, strong wooden slats (not bamboo) lock-stitched together by heavy, rot-proof seine twine. This lock weave, which holds slats permanently without slipping, is patented. All shades have double warps at both edges and are re-enforced by other double warps at intervals across the shade—no other shades are so re-enforced.

They can be raised or lowered as easily as an awning.

VUDOR SHADES come stained indelibly in soft colors to harmonize perfectly with your house.
